BHS Aviation receives operating license for jets

Bamberg/Zurich (20 January 2023). BHS Aviation Group has expanded its fleet in Switzerland with a Cessna Citation Latitude Jet and received its Air Operator Certificate (AOC). This investment will allow the VIP flight specialist to offer its customers more flexibility in their travel planning. The company, based in Germany and Switzerland, organizes individual passenger and business trips in state-of-the-art helicopters and jets.

The AOC is a prerequisite for being able to transport guests and cargo commercially. For this, the aviation company had to demonstrate experienced personnel with extensive expertise as well as technical and economic reliability. For around 30 years, the BHS Aviation Group has fully met these requirements for air traffic with helicopters and, since January 17 of this year, also again with business aircraft as well.

By investing in the private jet, the international operator for exclusive personal and business travel is responding to the growing demand for customized charter flights. "We offer our customers a very flexible and personal service, fast, absolutely reliable and all from a single source," confirms Daniel Suter, Managing Director of BHS Aviation AG. "We fly to destinations in the short- and medium-range sectors that have been less and less directly covered by commercial air traffic since the Covid restrictions. Our team finds the most suitable and efficient solution for each customer. For us, this starts, for example, with personal pick-up and escort upon arrival at the 'Private Terminal', as well as discreet, fast and reliable check-in with high hygiene and quality standards. In this way, we offer our passengers a first-class travel experience."

The latest addition to the BHS fleet features outstanding performance and state-of-the-art avionics. Even short runways such as the London City Airport can be approached without any problems. For sustainable flight operations, the Citation Latitude can also be fueled with Sustainable Aviation Fuel (SAF). Thanks to a long range of the jet, non-stop charter flights of up to 5000 kilometers are possible. The generous cabin with headroom and luxurious interior offers up to eight passengers every comfort for productive business trips and relaxing private flights.

About BHS Aviation Group
